

From: imac@polyex.com@inetgw
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/16/02 7:39pm
Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Hi,

If you guys want to find out some anti-competitive tactics Microsoft pulled, you should look into the nonsense they were pulling after 1993 or so when they divorced from IBM on the OS/2 project. Among other things they bought the only company that made a program to install OS/2 applications, and cancelled the OS/2 product within days. They also bullied computer manufactures with threats of higher Windows licenses if they dared bundle OS/2 with there machines. As an early developer of OS/2, this had a direct impact on myself and countless other OS/2 ISV's most of which are out of business now.

OS/2 Warp (Version 3.0 of OS/2) was a real threat to Microsoft and they did everything they could (legally or illegally) to sink the product.

-Adam Hall